4marks

After 15 days of continuous protests every where in Egypt on the 11th Feb 2011 President Hosni Mubarak resigned and passed power to the army, all requested were met, he has changed all the ministers in his Cabinet and the constitution has been changed so that anyone can choose to stand for election. Justice has also been served on the Minister of Interior and all the other corrupted ministers who are now facing court proceedings. There have also been many other political reforms, for example: Egyptian parliament will be re-elected in a free election with international control – without this protest Egypt would have stood under the dark clouds of control for maybe another 30 years and more. Changes made in Egypt through the original youth protests have also secured democracy for people across the whole of the Middle East: similar constitutional changes have happened in China, Jordan and Yemen. Syria and Bahrain have also started demonstrating to achieve what Egyptians all across the land have achieved in 2 weeks.

When was the last time you walked down a litter-free street? Although millions of pounds are spent on clearing rubbish every year, this alone cannot solve the problem. The solution lies in our hands. Dropping litter in street is against the law in Britain. You can be fined up to 1.000. Not only is litter ugly, but it can also be dangerous. Litter encourages vermin such as rats. Why is there so much litter? Most consumer products are over-packaged; a single item may be wrapped in plastic, put in a box, wrapped in cellophane and then put in a plastic carrier bag. What can we do about this growing problem? If every citizen does his or her job together clean up the streets. Try recycling paper and plastic bottles. Never drop litter; consider the smallest piece of paper contributes to the problem. Avoid buying over-packaged items from supermarkets and take your own carrier bags. You could also organise day-trips to the local countryside and beaches in holidays to pick up rubbish. If everyone makes himself responsible for maintaining high standards of cleanliness in their area, the problem may be solved
